

RE

RE is an extremely important subject in school, but is often misunderstood. There is a widely held misconception that RE is about telling children what to believe and how to live. The reality, however, is much different. It is crucial for exposing children to a variety of different world-views, beliefs and cultures, which, in turn, helps them become more spiritually, socially and morally tolerant. In many ways, Religious Education plays a key role in children's personal development. We are proud of the broad range of Religious Education experiences that our pupils encounter at St Andrew's, which include visitors and visits. Their worth was beautifully demonstrated in the enthusiasm and engagement of Y4 pupils at Maldon Mosque recently.
